

Bank of America Invitational Criterium 2005

The 2nd Annual Bank of America Invitational is set for Saturday August 6th 2005 in Charlotte, North Carolina USA. This event is billed as “The World’s Richest Criterium” with professional men competing for more than $125,000.00 in prize money. New for 2005 will be the addition of a women’s event with over $50,000.00 in prize money.

“The success of our 2004 event, through the support of Bank of America, The City of Charlotte and a host of others including the volunteers and 30,000+ spectators that supported the event, was beyond our expectations for our first year. I am particularly proud to say that substantial funding was raised in the support of The Brain Tumor Fund for the Carolinas,” says Race Director Thad Fischer. “ We look forward to our 2005 event along with the continued support in the fight against brain cancer and presenting a world class cycling event here in Charlotte”.

Riders from 23 different countries competed in the 2004 event with Ivan Dominguez of Colavita Bolla taking home the 1st prize. Men’s and Women’s team and riders interested in applying for an invitation may email fcecorp99@yahoo for more information on the process.
